Can you help adder to slither its way through the maze to find the gorse to coil in?

adder
adder

A bank of rope in the late hot sun; a cart of bark; a six, an eight;
For adder is an adder bank.

alliteration & illustration

Throughout the spells alliteration is used, which is the repetition of the same or similar sounds at the beginning of words, e.g. 'Fern's first form is furred'. You'll also see the acrostic technique in every spell, where the first letters of each line spell out the Lost Words, e.g. FERN. Close your eyes and think of your favourite part of the natural world around you. It could be a flower, bird, creature, tree - anything you choose.

Now, in the space below, can you write your own spell using alliteration and the acrostic technique to describe your favourite natural wonder? You can also use the space to illustrate your spell.

fern

Fern's first form is furred.

Each frond fast as a fiddle-head.

Beach, roll and unfold follows.

Fern flares.

Now fern is fully fanned.
